Johnny,
Oct 30, 4:21 PM

For my last birthday, my parents took me to a very special restaurant. My father said to the waiter, "It's my son's birthday today! We'd like to sit next to the window, please." "Of course!" said the waiter. "I'll give you the best table in the restaurant." The restaurant was full, but the waiter took us to a table next to the window. We sat down. There weren't any people at the table, but there was still food and drink on the table. The waiter began to take the food and drink away. "Perhaps the people who ordered this food didn't like it," I said to my dad. My dad said, "Perhaps not. But it's the best restaurant in town – with very expensive food! Just then, a group of people came to our table. They were surprised* to see us. When the waiter saw them, his face went red. "We just went to wash our hands before dinner!" they said to him. "We are still eating!"

Claire,
Sep12, 3:37 PM

One night, I went to a restaurant with my dad. My dad ordered soup, and I ordered a hamburger and chips. My hamburger and chips were very good and arrived quickly. My dad's soup arrived late, so he was very hungry. But he couldn't eat it. There was a fly* in it! He called the waiter. "Waiter! There's a fly in my soup!" he said. The waiter looked at the fly. "Don't worry, sir. It's dead*." My father shouted, "That's not the problem! What is it doing in my soup?" The waiter smiled and thought about the question. "Perhaps it wanted to learn to swim." We didn't go back to that restaurant again, and we never will!

This is my project about life in ancient Egypt.

In ancient Egypt there were a lot of interesting things to see. First of all, there were the pyramids. They are still there today, and nobody is sure how the people of ancient Egypt made them. Something else you can see in Egypt today are the statues* of the sphinxes. The most famous sphinx is the Great Sphinx of Giza. It's near the Pyramid of Khafra. You might think that all ancient Egyptians were builders. But they weren't. In fact, a lot of them were farmers and they worked in the fields. A lot of the farmers had sheep, cows and chickens. That way, they got meat, milk and eggs. There were a lot of weavers too. They made great clothes and sold them. But the people who bought the clothes didn't use money to pay for them, like we do today. They paid for their clothes with salt or food or other things. In their free time, the ancient Egyptian men went hunting or fishing. That's another way they got food.

The rich Egyptians liked having parties when they had free time. They often had exciting things like jugglers and acrobats at the parties. Sometimes I wish I was an ancient Egyptian!

The pyramids of Egypt are amazing. But Egypt isn't the only country with pyramids. There are pyramids in Mexico, too. The Sun Pyramid at Teotihuacan is huge and, like the pyramids in Egypt, nobody is quite sure how people built it. The Sun Pyramid is as high as a 20-storey* building and each side of its base* is 215 metres long. About 500,000 tourists climb the Sun Pyramid every year. There are also some pyramids in Greece. Most of them aren't as big as the ones in Egypt. And scientists aren't sure about them. Are the Greek pyramids natural or did people build them? One famous pyramid is the Pyramid of Hellenikon. Scientists say it isn't as old as the Egyptian pyramids. And it isn't as big – the sides of the base are between seven and nine metres long and it is only about three metres high! But you can go inside the Pyramid of Hellenikon. There is a large room inside. We don't know why people built the pyramid in Greece, but many think it was like a watchtower*. There are also pyramids in many other countries – China, Malaysia, Mexico and Peru, for example. The largest man-made pyramid in the world is in Mexico. The strange thing about the pyramids in different countries is that they all look similar. How did people in Mexico know how the people in Egypt made their pyramids? There are a lot of questions about pyramids and we still don't know all the answers.
